

Mourdock says it is also safer for people to keep their money in a bank, instead of their homes.

updated: 10/28/2009 12:57:04 PM

[UPDATED] State Rolling Out 'Bank on Indiana'

InsideIndianaBusiness.com Report

State Treasurer Richard Mourdock says there is a huge need throughout the state for financial education.

State Treasurer Richard Mourdock will unveil the "Bank on Indiana" financial education initiative during a news conference this afternoon. He says the effort targets more than 200,000 Indiana households that do not utilize banks. Mourdock believes the program can help people reduce monthly expenses, save for the future and establish good credit. The initiative is based on the successful "Bank on Evansville" program that was launched last year.

Source: Inside INdiana Business

Continued Below...

More News...

A "Bank on Indianapolis" program was started this year.

Mourdock says the statewide effort will involve as many as 80 different community service organization and possibly all 197 public depositories in the state.

Mourdock says as we continue to move toward a paperless society, more people will need a bank account just to qualify for employment.

Source: Indiana State Treasurers Office

INDIANA BUSINESS NEWS

- [\[UPDATED\] Central Indiana Welcomes Nigerian King](#)
- Christian Convention Eyeing Indianapolis
- Vectren Reports Q3 Results
- Lilly Opens New Facility in California
- Governor to Hand Out Halloween Candy From Five Hoosier Companies
- Leading Index Remains Flat For September
- Universities to Hold Business Continuity Seminar
- [\[UPDATED\] IU Center Predicts Small Drop in Holiday Sales](#)
- Grant County Receives \$1 Million in Disaster Assistance

print

email

newsletters

print

email

newsletters

